

CRAIG MAY BE FREED BEFORE NIGHT BY COURT ORDER TELLS CATERING WORKERS TO WAKE UP

Dr. William H. Craig.

Shelbyville, Ind., Dec. 6.—Dr. Wm. H. Craig, on trial charged with murder of Dr. Helene Knabe, the beautiful woman physician, may be freed before night by order of the court when the state concludes the evidence in chief.

Attorney Spahn for the defense will argue that the state has not proved that Dr. Knabe was a victim of murder and not a suicide, and that it has absolutely failed to connect his client with the mysterious tragedy in any way. He will point out that both of the state's witnesses called to identify Dr. Craig as the man near the Knabe flat have failed to swear positively that he is the man.

The state will place its chief reliance on the testimony that Dr. Craig told his associates at the Indiana Veterinary College, of which he is dean, that the woman physician was dead at 10:05 on the morning her body was discovered, whereas that information was not given him over the telephone until 11 a. m.

Hotel, restaurant and cafe workers were addressed at a meeting held last night at 175 West Washington street by Jerry Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America. Sullivan is bound for the national headquarters at Cincinnati from the American Federation of Labor convention, held recently in Seattle.

Sullivan was far from being satisfied with conditions in Chicago. He talked plainly and told the men they had no "gumption." He suggested that they learn a lesson from the women waitresses, who this week, under the leadership of their organizer, Elizabeth Maloney, added 225 to their membership by unionizing the girls in the Thompson and Knab restaurants.

Sullivan recounted the story of the origination of the Chicago motto, "I Will," which was first used 27 years ago by a very aggressive waiters' union, and warned them not to change the motto to "I Will Not."

We note with fond apprehension that our German-American, French-American, Irish-American, Scotch-American and other fellow-American societies are gunning for Ambassador Page for telling the court of St. James that the United States is "English led and English ruled." Maybe it's his knee-breeches pinching him that makes Page wild like that.

A Tralee (England) farmer has a cow which refuses to drink water supplied in the ordinary way. When she is thirsty she leaves the field, goes to a lane where there is a water tap, turns this on and takes a drink. The story is supported by photographs, and the cow is credited with turning the tap off after dri
